

KEVIN A. ADAMSON

Founder & Mediator

Kevin Adamson brings more than twenty years of civil litigation and high-level negotiation experience to his work as a mediator. Since founding his law practice in 2001, he has handled high-stakes personal injury and complex civil matters, securing multi-million-dollar verdicts and settlements in catastrophic injury cases. He understands the strategic decisions, financial exposure, and client pressures that shape litigation from both sides of the table.

His effectiveness as a mediator is grounded in real courtroom experience. He has tried cases, evaluated risk under uncertainty, and advised clients when to press forward and when to resolve. He understands how juries think, how judges rule, and how litigation risk evolves as trial approaches. That perspective allows him to speak candidly with counsel and clients about exposure, leverage, and practical outcomes.

In addition to his litigation career, Kevin spent more than a decade representing professional baseball players as a certified sports agent. He negotiated player contracts, handled arbitration proceedings, structured endorsement agreements, and guided career transitions. Those negotiations required managing strong personalities, balancing long-term relationships with immediate objectives, and resolving disputes where reputations and livelihoods were at stake. The ability to navigate ego, pressure, and competing incentives now defines his mediation style.

He is known for thorough preparation, direct communication, and disciplined negotiation. He creates an environment where parties feel heard while keeping the process focused and moving toward resolution. He works to identify the true drivers of a dispute — legal, financial, and personal — and guides parties toward practical outcomes that avoid the expense and uncertainty of trial.

Kevin is a registered neutral with the Georgia Office of Dispute Resolution.
